LIFE AND ADVENTURES

OF

ETER PORCUPINE,

WITH

A FULL AND FAIR ACCOUNT

OF

Il his Authoring Transactions;

NG A SURE AND INFALLIBLE GUIDE FOR ALL ENTERPRISING YOUNG MEN WHO WISH TO MAKE A FORTUNE BY WRITING

PAMPHLETS.

BY PETER PORCUPINE Himfelf.

"Now, you lying Varlets, you shall see how a plain tale will ut you down."

SHAKESPEARE.

PHILADELPHIA:

nted for, and fold by, WILLIAM COBBETT, at No. 25, North Second Street, opposite Christ Church.
M.DCC.XCVI.

ITE AND ADVINERUES

I have flons of never ditill they "povert tion." and jaun it was the that lew became abundan prang fr

conferre

/ Nin

Nicht am Laint V

All his Auchoring Translations;

one consider a first consider a solution of the solution of th

PURITURY.

The Experience of The Table of The Table of The Table of Table of Fire District a conservation of position and every matern.

Consideration (-4)

·2 19.15 0 A 11 14

es amende and the second second second second inted toppend four by, Whithen Cosses is a like the second street, opposites and the the cost

Prviz podana

PREFACE.

THE Celebrated Dean of St. Patrick's somewhere observes, that a man of talents no fooner emerges from obscurity than all the blockheads are instantly up in arms against him. Fully perfuaded of the truth of this observation, I should have been prepared for hostility, had I imagined myself a man of talents; but, knowing the contrary too well, I little expected that the harmless essays from my pen would have conjured up against me this numerous and supid host. It is their misfortune, never to form a right conception of any person or thing, and therefore their abuse is not always a certain proof of merit in the object on which it is bestowed: their ignorance lessens the honour conferred by their envy, hatred and malice.

I have long been the butt of the filly asperfions of this grovelling tribe; but their spite never discovered itself in its deepest colours, till they saw me, as they imagined, "issue from
"poverty to the appearance of better condi"tion." Then it was that their gall ran over, and jaundiced their whole countenances; then it was that the stupidest of all stupid gazettes, that lewd and common strumpet, the Aurora, became pregnant with the following bastard, as abundant in falsehood as any one that ever sprang from the loins of Poor Richard.

TH

fooner e

Fully p

had I in ed that have co stupid 1

form a 1

and the tain probestowe conferre

I have fions of never of till they

" pove

" tion."

it was that lev

became abundan

fprang :

RIUN PORCUETA

MINUM ONE ATIO

NIVIV

A FULL I MD PAIR ACCEUNT

7

All his Auchoring Transactions;

onego promini a protesta de menos a partes partes della parte a comcal il meno protesto, respirator a partes per actividad della

TALL THE LEVEL C.

DY PERENTRON CUPRYS 18 18 18 and the state of the second of the state of and the second section of the second second section of the second second second section of the second secon

PETER DELPE

Sinced topy and dold by, Whiteham Consector in Month

PREFACE.

A 5 5 15

THE Celebrated Dean of St. Patrick's somewhere observes, that a man of talents no fooner emerges from obscurity than all the blockheads are instantly up in arms against him. Fully perfuaded of the truth of this observation, I should have been prepared for hostility, had I imagined myself a man of talents; but, knowing the contrary too well, I little expected that the harmless essays from my pen would have conjured up against me this numerous and stupid host. It is their misfortune, never to form a right conception of any person or thing, and therefore their abuse is not always a certain proof of merit in the object on which it is bestowed: their ignorance lessens the honour conferred by their envy, hatred and malice.

I have long been the butt of the filly asperfions of this grovelling tribe; but their spite
never discovered itself in its deepest colours,
till they saw me, as they imagined, "issue from
"poverty to the appearance of better condi"tion." Then it was that their gall ran over,
and jaundiced their whole countenances; then
it was that the stupidest of all stupid gazettes,
that lewd and common strumpet, the Aurora,
became pregnant with the following bastard, as
abundant in falsehood as any one that ever
sprang from the loins of Poor Richard.

"FOR THE AURORA.

" dr " do " try " br

" hi

" a f

" oc

" of

" dr

" the

" na

" fee

" co

" en

" Fr

" has

" pe

" en

" the

" ay

" Th

" for

" Re

" of

" the

" alre

" of

" bee

" ma

HISTORY OF PETER PORCUPINE.

III Cel caracana some management of a formor diene unioned, that a trans of talents no

-doo" Mr. Bache, hardomen seguin

As the people of America may not be " informed who PETER PORCUPINE is, the " celebrated manufacturer of lies, and retaile of filth, I will give you fome little account of " this pestiferous animal. This wretch was " obliged to abscond from his darling Old Eng-" land to avoid being turned off into the other " world before, what he supposed, his time "It may be well imagined, that in a land of " liberty and flowing with milk and honey, his or precipitate retreat could not have been owing to any offence committed against the govern-" ment very honourable to himfelf. Gnawed "by the worm that never dies, his own wretch " edness would ever prevent him from making " any attempt in favour of human happiness " His usual occupation at home was that of " garret-scribbler, excepting a little night-bush " ness occasionally, to supply unavoidable ex-" igencies; Grubb-street did not answer his purposes, and being scented by certain tip " ftaffs for fomething more than fcribbling, he " took a French leave for France. His evil " genius purfued him here, and as his finger " were as long as ever, he was obliged as fud-" denly to leave the Republic, which has now

E.

ot be s, the etailer unt of h was Engother time, and of

ey, hi

OWIDS

overnnawed vretchnaking opinefs at of a ht-bus-ble exver his ain tiping, he His evil fingers as fud-

" drawn forth all his venom for her attempt to " do him justice. On his arrival in this coun-" try, he figured some time as a pedagogue; " but as this employment fearcely furnished " him falt to his porridge, he having been li-" terally without hardly bread to eat, and not " a second shirt to his back," he refumed his old " occupation of fcribbling, having little chance " of fuccess in the other employments which " drove him to this country. His talent at lies " and Billingsgate rhetoric, introduced him to "the notice of a certain foreign agent, who " was known during the Revolution by the " name of traitor. This faid agent has been " seen to pay frequent visits to Peter. To " atone for his transgressions in the mother " country, as well as to get a little more bread " to eat than he had been accustomed to, he " enlifted in the cause of his gracious Majesty. " From the extreme of poverty and filth, he " has fuddenly sprouted into at least the ap-" pearance of better condition; for he has tak-" en a house for the sale of his large poison, at "the enormous rent of twelve hundred dollars " a year, and has paid a year's rent in advance!! "The public will now be enabled to account " for the overflowings of his gall against the "Republic of France, and the Republicans " of this country, as well as his devotion to "the cause of tyranny and of Kings. From " the frequency of vifits paid him by the agent " already mentioned, and his fudden change " of condition, secret service-money must have "been liberally employed; for his zeal to " make atonement to his mother country feems

" proportioned to the magnitude of his offence, and the guineas advanced. As this fugitive felon has crept from his hole, his quills will now become harmless; for hitherto they have only excited apprehension because the beast who shot them was concealed. I have a number of anecdotes respecting him, that I will soon trouble you with, for the amusement of the public. This statement will convince Peter, that I know him well, and that I have only disclosed a part of the truth.

" PAUL HEDGEHOG."

And the second of porture and the second a commercial trace from the contract of to tome and the small trade of the orbita?

reme troup e all a son orac House framous eds of I want source eds when the mount and 3

This Paul Hedgehog I know nothing of. I can hardly suppose that he is one of my coufins at New-York: if he be, for the honour of our family, I hope that he is a bastard. But, let Paul be what he will, he is not the only one who has attempted to fink me in the opinion of a public that has ever honoured my essays with distinguished marks of approbation. I have been well informed, that it is currently reported, that Mr. Thomas Bradford, the Book-seller, " put a coat upon my back," and that, when I was first favoured with his patronage, I had not a "second shirt to my back."

tions on it kind ford, in the fee f world an example.

be when I may life.

I he fervata
" No
" bou " even
" he I

" cula " nior " mak " polii

" are

" com " mira " his p f

lis

nis

er-

e-

al-

ct-

th,

te-

ow d a

I

cou-

nour

ard.

the

the

my oba-

it is ford,

ack,"

h his

my.

Were I to calculate upon the usual operations of truth and gratitude, I should look upon it as impossible that infinuations of this kind had ever been thrown out by Mr. Bradford, or any of his family; but, now-a-days, in this happy age of reason and liberty, we see such extraordinary things happen in the world, that to doubt, at least, does not argue an excess of credulity or incredulity.

Let the propagators of all these falsehoods be who they may, I am much obliged to them for giving me this opportunity of publishing the History of my Life and Adventures, a thing that I was determined to do, whenever a fair occasion offered, and which never could have been so well timed as at the moment when I am stepping into a situation, where I may probably continue for the rest of my life.

I here remember well what I faid in my Observations on the Emigration of Doctor Priestley.

"No man has a right to pry into his neighbour's private concerns; and the opinions of every man are his private concerns, while he keeps them so; that is to say, while they are confined to himself, his family and particular friends; but, when he makes those opinions public; when he once attempts to make converts, whether it be in religion, politics, or any thing else; when he once comes forward as a candidate for public admiration, esteem or compassion, his opinions, his principles, his motives, every action of " his life, public or private, become the fair " fubject of public discussion."

This is a principle I laid down in the first original page I ever wrote for the press. On this principle it is, that I think myself justified in the present publication, and that I am ready to approve of others for publishing whatever they may know concerning me. Let them write on, till their old pens are worn to the stump: let the devils sweat; let them fire their balls at my reputation, till the very press cries out murder. If ever they hear me whine or complain, I will give them leave to fritter my carcass and trail my guts along the street, as the French sans-culottes did those of Thomas Mauduit.

and disperingulate, a digitation, where the a removed with the ball that the first (1/4, water the transmission of the transmission of

- hair en et lyra or says a shift and A https://www.daagerabs: abritate apraises of way male the us project to be seen, while description of the left in the end of white the con-

To share the beautiful with the state of the of the property of the property and the property of the proper professor of a translation as the work of Common to city of a little rapidly or a second and the worse tour still so a calcilities who poblic or .

nutrition site, with a monto no month of the

The later to a special state to be the second ven to the relt of summers in fp prefer I hav of in land; who count

PE

Wi further this player prior have ther c

THE

LIFE AND ADVENTURES

OF

PETER PORCUPINE.

To be descended from an illustrious family certainly reflects honour on any man, in spite of the sans-culotte principles of the present day. This is, however, an honour that I have no pretension to. All that I can boast of in my birth, is, that I was born in Old England; the country from whence came the men who explored and settled North America; the country of Penn, and of the father and mother of General Washington.

With respect to my ancestors, I shall go no further back than my grand-father, and for this plain reason, that I never heard talk of any prior to him. He was a day-labourer, and I have heard my father say, that he worked for one farmer from the day of his marriage to

B

e fair

e first On ustifi-

I am what-

Let

them very

ear me ave to ng the

ose of that of his death, upwards of forty years. He died before I was born, but I have often flept beneath the same roof that had sheltered him, and where his widow dwelt for feveral years after his death. It was a little thatched cottage with a garden before the door. It had but two windows; a damfon tree shaded one, and a clump of filberts the other. Here I and my brothers went every Christmas and Whitsuntide, to fpend a week or two, and torment the poor old woman with our noise and dilapidations. She used to give us milk and bread for breakfast, an apple pudding for our dinner, and a piece of bread and cheese for supper. Her fire was made of turf, cut from the neighbouring heath, and her evening light was a rush dipped in greafe.

How much better is it, thus to tell the naked truth, than to descend to such miserable shifts as Doctor Franklin has had recourse to, in order to persuade people, that his fore-fathers were men of wealth and confideration. Not being able to refer his reader to the herald's office for proofs of the fame and antiquity of his family, he appeals to the etymology of his name, and points out a passage in an obsolete book, whence he has the conscience to infift on our concluding, that, in the Old English language, a Franklin meant a man of good reputation and of consequence. According to Doctor Johnson, a Franklin was what we now call a gentleman's steward or land-bailiff, a personage one degree above a bumbailiff, and that's all.

Every to belie fopher. a lightn of fun-f He was chimne dor, no ift, and The leg hook, a irrecove cheated in his d to fleep his desc the doo tificatio been a

My
The rest ty of he ry brill ed, for little be and the the expension willage he had improve mather well, a of difp fidel.

He lept

im,

vith

vin-

mp

to

She

eak-

nd a

Her

our-

rush

aked

hifts

n orthers

Not

ald's ty of

of his

olete

ist on lan-

puta-

octor

call a

onage

all.

Every one will, I hope, have the goodness to believe, that my grandfather was no philosopher. Indeed he was not. He never made a lightning rod nor bottled up a fingle quart of fun-shine in the whole course of his life. He was no almanac-maker, nor quack, nor chimney-doctor, nor foap-boiler, nor ambassador, nor printer's devil: neither was he a deift, and all his children were born in wedlock. The legacies he left, were, his fcythe, his reaphook, and his flail; he bequeathed no old and irrecoverable debts to an hospital: he never cheated the poor during his life, nor mocked them in his death. He has, it is true, been suffered to fleep quietly beneath the green-ford; but, if his descendants cannot point to his statue over the door of a library, they have not the morthe the thin daily accused of having been a whorematter, a hypocrite and an infidel.

My father, when I was born, was a farmer. The reader will easily believe, from the poverty of his parents, that he had received no very brilliant education: he was, however, learned, for a man in his rank of life. When a little boy, he drove plough for two-pence a day, and these his earnings were appropriated to the expenses of an evening school. What a village school-master could be expected to teach, he had learnt, and had besides considerably improved himself in several branches of the mathematicks. He understood land surveying well, and was often chosen to draw the plans of disputed territory: in short, he had the reputation of possessing experience and under standing, which never fails, in England, to give a man in a country place, some little weight with his neighbours. He was honest, in dustrious, and frugal; it was not, therefore, won derful, that he should be situated in a good farm, and happy in a wife of his own rank like him, beloved and respected.

So much for my ancestors, from whom, if I derive no honour, I derive no shame.

I had (and I hope I yet have) three brothers: the eldest is a shop-keeper, the second a farmer, and the youngest, if alive, is in the service of the Honourable East India company, a private soldier, perhaps, as I have been in the service of the king. I was born on the ninth of March 1766: the exact age of my brothers I have forgotten, but I remember having heard my mother say, that there was but three years and three quarters difference between the age of the oldest and that of the youngest.

A father like ours, it will be readily supposed did not suffer us to eat the bread of idlened I do not remember the time when I did not earn my living. My first occupation was, driving the small birds from the turnip seed, and the rooks from the peas. When I first trudge a-field, with my wooden bottle and my satche swung over my shoulders, I was hardly able climb the gates and stiles, and, at the close of the day, to reach home was a task of inference of the day, to reach home was a task of inference of the day, to reach home was a task of inference of the day.

nite di ing wh rowing hence reaper ing ple boriou had fo teen y three pride,

I he to feh did no the wiread arknowld not perfore his ly faile it, and heart, ples.

Our land, ed; the of my perfect never gular p grandf the lice If I has ındei

id, to

littl

st, in

Won

1 goo

rank

m, i

e bro

econ

in th

pany

on th

of m r hav

is buce be of the

1ppo enel

lid no , dri

l, an

udge

atch able

clo

fin

nite difficulty. My next employment was weeding wheat, and leading a fingle horse at harrowing barley. Hoeing peas followed, and hence I arrived at the honour of joining the reapers in harvest, driving the team and holding plough. We were all of us strong and laborious, and my father used to boast, that he had four boys, the eldest of whom was but sistem years old, who did as much work as any three men in the parish of Farnham. Honest pride, and happy days!

I have some faint recollection of going to school to an old woman, who, I believe, did not succeed in learning me my letters. In the winter evenings my father learnt us all to read and write, and gave us a pretty tolerable knowledge of arithmetic. Grammar he did not perfectly understand himself, and therefore his endeavours to learn us that, necessarily failed; for, though he thought he understood it, and though he made us get the rules by heart, we learnt nothing at all of the principles.

Our religion was that of the Church of England, to which I have ever remained attached; the more so, perhaps, as it bears the name of my country. As my ancestors were never persecuted for their religious opinions, they never had an opportunity of giving such a singular proof of their faith as Doctor Franklin's grandfather did, when he kept his Bible under the lid of a close-stool. (What a book-case!) If I had been in the place of Doctor Franklin,

I never would have related this ridiculous circumstance, especially as it must be construed into a boast of his grandfather's having an extraordinary degree of veneration for a book, which, it is well known, he himself durst not believe in.

As to politics, we were like the rest of the country people in England; that is to say, we neither knew or thought any thing about the matter. The shouts of victory or the murmurs at a defeat, would now-and-then break in upon our tranquillity for a moment; but I do not remember ever having seen a news-paper in the house, and most certainly that privation did not render us less industrious, happy or free.

After, however, the American war had continued for fome time, and the cause and nature of it began to be understood, or rather misunderstood, by the lower classes of the people in England, we became a little better acquainted with subjects of this kind. It is well known, that the people were, as to numbers, nearly equally divided in their opinions concerning that war, and their wishes respecting the result of it. My father was a partizan of the Americans: he used frequently to dispute on the fubject with the gardener of a nobleman who lived near us. This was generally done with good humour, over a pot of our best ale; yet the disputants sometimes grew warm, and gave way to language that could not fail to attract our attention. My father was worsted without doubt, a fenfible political a partia one wife was our the Ame young n king's triple, our they wo cause was ever fure

Men nate in Whether ness of I tend to so for the lengt was carrefollowing

My fa every ye The fair he journ abours o has take red

X-

k,

10t

the

we the

ureak

do

per

or

con-

ture

fun-

le in nted

own,

ning

efult

Ame-

who

with

yet

gave hout

doubt, as he had for antagonist, a shrewd and sensible old Scotchman, far his superior in political knowledge; but he pleaded before a partial audience: we thought there was but one wise man in the world, and that that one was our father. He who pleaded the cause of the Americans had an advantage, too, with young minds: he had only to represent the king's troops as sent to cut the throats of a people, our friends and relations, merely because they would not submit to oppression, and his cause was gained. Speaking to the passions is ever sure to succeed on the uninformed.

Men of integrity are generally pretty obstimate in adhering to an opinion once adopted.
Whether it was owing to this, or to the weakness of Mr. Martin's arguments, I will not pretend to say, but he never could make a convert of my father: he continued an American, and softaunch a one, that he would not have suffered his best friend to drink success to the king's arms at his table. I cannot give the reader a better idea of his obstinacy in this respect, and of the length to which this difference in sentiment was carried in England, than by relating the sollowing instance.

My father used to take one of us with him very year to the great hop-fair at Wey-Hill. The fair was held at Old Michaelmas-tide, and he journey was, to us, a fort of reward for the abours of the summer. It happened to be my um to go thither the very year that Long-Island has taken by the British. A great company of hop-merchants and farmers were just fitting down to supper as the post arrived, bringing in the extraordinary Gazette which announced the victory. A hop-factor from London tool the paper, placed his chair upon the table, and began to read with an audible voice. He wa opposed, a dispute ensued, and my father re tired, taking me by the hand, to another apart ment, where we supped with about a doze others of the same sentiments. Here Washing ton's health, and fuccess to the Americans were repeatedly toasted, and this was the fir time, as far as I can recollect, that I ever hear the General's name mentioned. Little did then dream, that I should ever see the man and still less that I should hear some of his ow countrymen reviling and execrating him.

Let not the reader imagine, that I wish assume any merit from this, perhaps mistake prejudice of an honoured and beloved paren Whether he was right or wrong is not no worth talking about: that I had no opinion my own is certain; for, had my father been the other fide, I should have been on the oth fide too, and should have looked upon t company I then made a part of as malco tents and rebels. I mention these circus stances merely to show that I was not "nurl " in the lap of aristocracy," and that I d not imbibe my principles, or prejudices, fro those who were the advocates of blind subm fion. If my father had any fault, it was n being fubmissive enough, and I am much afraid :

It wo dwell o try boy matches at once pened which a fit a rel of Porti for the fi er did I I could i nor can the fame young di

bolom of

But it grand fle I had head land: I had head land: I had head land: I had land: I had land for that I had miration deeds of of the Sp morable men never afraid my acquaintance have but too often difcovered the fame fault in his fon.

ting

gin

ced

tool

and

Wa

r re

part

ozer

hing cans firl

near did

man s ow

ish

ake

aren

t no

ion (

oth on th

alco. ircun

nurl

t I d

, fro

fubm

was no mucu

It would be as useless as unentertaining to dwell on the occupations and sports of a country boy; to lead the reader to fairs, cricket-matches and hare-hunts. I shall therefore come at once to the epoch, when an accident happened that gave that turn to my future life, which at last brought me to the United States.

Towards the autumn of 1782 I went to visit a relation who lived in the neighbourhood of Portsmouth. From the top of Portsdown, I, for the first time, beheld the sea, and no sooner did I behold it than I wished to be a sailor. I could never account for this sudden impulse, nor can I now. Almost all English boys feel the same inclination: it would seem that, like young ducks, instinct leads them to rush on the bosom of the water.

But it was not the sea alone that I saw: the grand sleet was riding at anchor at Spithead. I had heard of the wooden walls of Old England: I had formed my ideas of a ship and of asset; but, what I now beheld so far surpassed what I had ever been able to form a conception of, that I stood lost between assonishment and admiration. I had heard talk of the glorious deeds of our admirals and sailors, of the defeat of the Spanish Armada, and of all those memorable combats that good and true Englishmen never sail to relate to their children about nd reprefer to the me December of a hundred times a year. The brave Rodney victories over our natural enemies, the French and Spaniards, had long been the theme our praise, and the burthen of our songs. It sight of the fleet brought all these into my mind in confused order, it is true, but with irresults ble force. My heart was inflated with nation pride. The sailors were my countrymen, the self-belonged to my country, and surely I have part in it, and in all its honours: yet, the honours I had not earned; I took to myself sort of reproach for possessing what I had right to, and resolved to have a just claim sharing in the hardships and the dangers.

me, british the tea, and no focu-

I arrived at my uncle's late in the evening with my mind full of my fea-faring proje Though I had walked thirty miles during t day, and confequently was well wearied, I fle not a moment. It was no fooner day-light th I arose and walked down towards the old call on the beach of Spithead. For a fixpen given to an invalid I got permission to go up the battlements: here I had a closer view the fleet, and at every look my impatience be on board increased. In short, I went from the castle to Portsmouth, got into a boat, a was in a few minutes on board the Pegasus m of war, commanded by the Right Honou ble George Berkley, brother to the Earl de of our admirals and lawers. Berkley. the Spanish Asimeda

The Captain had more compassion than generally met with in men of his profession he represented to me the toils I must undergo and the principle of the gardied to a gardie hois con en, I ha accuse eir hats er patri able at

at I wa

I in valerkley, as he fer orthmouth e Port-A lled amovice.

forely ne and p ard the request

return spoiled end ne (

T

ninc

efif

tion

1,0t

Ih

, the

felf

nadi

aim

09 venin

proje

ingt

, I fle

th th

d cal

ixpen

o up

view

tience

ent fre

oat, a

afus m

Honou

Earl

than ofessio

underg

nd the punishment that the least disobedience meglect would subject me to. He persuaded ne to return home, and I remember he connded his advice with telling me, that it was etter to be led to church in a halter, to be tidto a girl that I did not like, than to be tied othe gang-way, or, las the failors dall it, mared to mis roper. From the conclusion of this bolesome counsel, I perceived that the capin thought I had eloped on account of a affard. I blushed, band that confirmed him his opinion; but I declare to the reader, at I was no more guilty of fuch an offence an Mr. Swanwick, or any other gentleman hois constitutionally virtuous. No; thank heam, I have none of the Franklintonian crimes accuse myself of; my children do not hang eir hats up in other men's houses; I am neiin order to accompandoophermoon of rebro ni

I in vain attempted to convince Captain erkley, that choice alone had led me to the left he sent me on shore, and I at last quitted or smouth; but not before I had applied to a Port-Admiral, Evans, to get my name encled among those who were destined for the vice. I was, in some fort, obliged to account the Admiral with what had passed on and the Pegasus, in consequence of which request was resuled, and I happily escaptorely against my will, from the most toil le and perilous profession in the world.

returned once more to the plough, but I spoiled for a farmer. I had, before my Ports.

mouth adventure, never known any other ambition than that of surpassing my brothers in the different labours of the field; but it was quit otherwise now; I sighed for a sight of the world the little island of Britain seemed too small compass for me. The things in which I hadtake the most delight were neglected; the singing of the birds grew insipid, and even the heart-cheering cry of the hounds, after which I formerly use to fly from my work, bound o'er the fields, and dash through the brakes and coppices, was hear with the most torpid indifference. Still, however, I remained at home till the following spring, when I quitted it, perhaps, for even

It was on the fixth of May 1783, that like Don Quixotte, fallied forth to feek ventures. I was dreffed in my holiday cloth in order to accompany two or three lastes Guildford fair. They were to affemble at house about three miles from my home, wh I was to attend them; but, unfortunately me, I had to cross the London turnpike road. stage-coach had just turned the fummit of a and was rattling down towards me at a me rate. The notion of going to London ne entered my mind till this very moment, yet step was completely determined on, before coach came to the fpot where I stood. U got, and was in London about nine o'clo in the evening will, from grineys that in

It was by mere accident that I had more enough to defray the expenses of this d Being rigged out for the fair, I had three four certa few all, ed av ed by waite Hill, half

By has h tions prefer one c conve learnt for wh in the er inq with r danger he felt home, to pre were to ed to fa time I ed of it would fuffer m acquain threaten am

th

rld

all

ake

ng (

hee

, an

hear

hor

owi

ver

Ols

that ek a cloth

affes

le at avh

tely

ad.

ofal

n ner

, yet

fore

d mor

three four crown and half-crown pieces (which most certainly I did not intend to spend) besides a few shillings and half-pence. This my little all, which I had been years in amassing, melted away, like snow before the sun, when touched by the singers of the inn-keepers and their waiters. In short, when I arrived at Ludgate-Hill, and had paid my fare, I had but about half a crown in my pocket.

By a commencement of that good luck, which has hitherto attended me through all the lituations in which fortune has placed me, I was preserved from ruin. A gentleman, who was one of the paffengers in the stage, fell into conversation with me at dinner, and he soon learnt that I was going I knew not whither nor for what. This gentleman was a hop-merchant in the borough of Southwark, and, upon closer inquiry, it appeared that he had often dealt with my father at Wey-Hillo He knew the danger I was in; he was himself a father, and he felt for my parents. His house became my home, he wrote to my father, and endeavoured to prevail on me to obey his orders, which were to return immediately home. I am ashamed to fay that I was disobedient. It was the first time I had ever been fo, and I have repented of it from that moment to this. Willingly would I have returned, but pride would not suffer me to do it. I feared the scoffs of my acquaintances more than the real evils that threatened me. His some and I stally accounts thes, on older date, to seem candle. I worked thought the My generous preserver, finding my obstinacy not to be overcome, began to look out for an employment for me. He was preparing an advertisement for the news-paper, when an acquaintance of his, an attorney, called in to see him. He related my adventure to this gentleman, whose name was Holland, and who, happening to want an understrapping quilldriver, did me the honour to take me into his service, and the next day saw me perched upon a great high stool, in an obscure chamber in Gray's Inn, endeavouring to decypher the crabbed draughts of my employer.

referred from rune. A scorlanger, who was

I could write a good plain hand, but I could not read the pot-hooks and hangers of Mr. Holland. He was a month in learning me to copy without almost continual affishance, and even then I was of but little use to him; for, besides that I wrote a snail's pace, my want of knowledge in orthography gave him infinite trouble: so that, for the first two months I was a dead weight upon his hands. Time, however, rendered me useful, and Mr. Holland was pleased to tell me that he was very well satisfied with me, just at the very moment when I began to grow extremely distatisfied with him.

No part of my life has been totally unattended with pleasure, except the eight or nine months. I passed in Gray's Inn. The office (for so the dungeon where I wrote was called) was so dark, that, on cloudy days, we were obliged to burn candle. I worked like a galley-slave from five from that moment to this.

in th fome have twee and] give . with . then befor His (the sa gy tha theets two in heaver me be blubbe deny r will, fi lential

Mr. himfelf
I was le as he of law, wh London
means.
uglieft of and exp all the n lt would compare

creature

me fro

1

0

0,

]-

IS

per

he 1011 uld

Mr.

e to

and

for,

it of

nite

Was

howland

well

ment

with ended

onths

fo the dark,

burn

n five in the morning till eight or nine at night, and fometimes all night long. How many quarrels have I affisted to foment and perpetuate between those poor innocent fellows, John Doe and Richard Roe! How many times (God forgive me!) have I fet them to affault each other with guns, fwords, flaves and pitch-forks, and then brought them to answer for their misdeeds before Our Sovereign Lord the King feated in His Court of Westminster! When I think of the faids and foforths and the counts of tautology that I fcribbled over; when I think of those fleets of feventy-two words, and those lines two inches a part, my brain turns. Gracious heaven! if I am doomed to be wretched, bury me beneath Iceland fnows, and let me feed on blubber; ftretch me under the burning line and deny me thy propitious dews; nay, if it be thy will, fuffocate me with the infected and peftilential air of a democratic club room; but fave me from the desk of an attorney! 191 3011 2011 1

Mr. Holland was but little in the chambers himself. He always went out to dinner, while I was left to be provided for by the Laundress, as he called her. Those gentlemen of the law, who have resided in the Inns of court in London, know very well what a Laundress means. Ours was, I believe, the oldest and ugliest of the officious sisterhood. She had age and experience enough to be Lady Abbess of all the nuns in all the convents of Irish-Town. It would be wronging the witch of Endor to compare her to this hag, who was the only creature that deigned to enter into conversation with me. All except the name, I was in prison, and this Weird Sister was my keeper. Our chambers were, to me, what the subterraneous cavern was to Gil Blas: his description of the Dame Leonarda exactly suited my Laundress; nor were the professions, or rather the practice, of our masters altogether dissimilar.

I never quitted this gloomy recess except on Sundays, when I usually took a walk to St. James's Park, to feast my eyes with the fight of the trees, the grafs, and the water. In one of these walks I happened to cast my eye on an advertisement, inviting all loyal young men, who had a mind to gain riches and glory, to repair to a certain rendezvous, where they might enter into His Majesty's marine ser vice, and have the peculiar happiness and ho nour of being enrolled in the Chatham Division. I was not ignorant enough to be the dupe of this morfel of military bombast; but a change was what I wanted: befides, I knew that marines went to fea, and my defire to be on that element had rather increased than diminished by my being penned up in London. In short I resolved to join this glorious corps; and, t avoid all possibility of being discovered by m friends, I went down to Chatham and enlisted into the marines as I thought, but the net morning I found myfelf before a Captain of marching regiment. There was no retreating I had taken a shilling to drink his Majesty health, and his further bounty was ready for my reception.

man friend in the "an told been eft an was a rishin He of this telefactly thithe

I e had t made I rem during my ex of the very c hours, mon to ltudy. than I a circul part of once o derable, rected b plays, h

with equ

in

er.

er-

my

her

dif-

cept

St.

fight

one

oung

and where

e ser-

nd ho

vision

ipe o

hang

at ma n tha

inithe

1 fhor

and, t

by m nlistee

ae nei

in of reating

Lajesty

ady fo

When I told the Captain (who was an Irishman, and who has since been an excellent friend to me), that I thought myself engaged in the marines: "By Jases, my lad," said he, "and you have had a narrow escape." He told me, that the regiment into which I had been so happy as to enlist was one of the oldest and boldest in the whole army, and that it was at that moment serving in that sine, slou-rishing and plentiful country, Nova Scotia. He dwelt long on the beauties and riches of this terrestrial Paradise, and dismissed me, perfectly enchanted with the prospect of a voyage thither.

I enlisted early in 1784, and, as peace had then taken place, no great hafte was made to fend recruits off to their regiments. I remained upwards of a year at Chatham, during which time I was employed in learning my exercise, and taking my tour in the duty of the garrison. My leisure time, which was a very confiderable portion of the twenty-four hours, was fpent, not in the diffipations common to fuch a way of life, but in reading and study. In the course of this year I learnt more than I had ever done before. I subscribed to a circulating library at Brompton, the greatest part of the books in which I read more than once over. The library was not very confiderable, it is true, nor in my reading was I directed by any degree of taste or choice. Novels, plays, history, poetry, all were read, and nearly with equal avidity.

D

Such a course of 'reading could be attended with but little profit: it was skimming over the furface of every thing. One branch of learning, however, I went to the bottom with, and that the most effential branch too, the grammar of my mother tongue. I had experienced the want of a knowledge of grammar during my stay with Mr. Holland; but it is very probable that I never should have thought of encountering the study of it, had not accident placed me under a man whose friendship extended beyond his interest. Writing a fair hand procured me the honour of being copyil to Colonel Debieg, the commandant of the garrison. I transcribed the famous correspondence between him and the Duke of Richmond which ended in the good and gallant old Colo nel being stripped of the reward, bestowed on him for his long and meritorious fervitude.

Being totally ignorant of the rules of grammar, I necessarily made many mistakes in copying, because no one can copy letter by letter, nor even word by word. The Colone saw my deficiency, and strongly recommended study. He enforced his advice with a fort of injunction, and with a promise of reward in case of success.

I procured me a Lowth's grammar, and applied myself to the study of it with unceasing assistance, assistance, and not without some profit; so though it was a considerable time before I sull comprehended all that I read, still I read an studied with such unremitted attention, that, last, I gross scribe three every on guaing it fentine ascribe found it was has leed of white

This advant always and, n none o young

Ther to mee
army.
reward foon ra which, l fome pe pence p knot up now, M more h CuftomLing mu

well as (

last, I could write without falling into any very gross errors. The pains I took cannot be described: I wrote the whole grammar out two or three times; I got it by heart; I repeated it every morning and every evening, and, when on guard, I imposed on myself the task of saying it all over once every time I was posted sentinel. To this exercise of my memory I ascribe the retentiveness of which I have since sound it capable, and to the success with which it was attended, I ascribe the perseverance that has led to the acquirement of the little learning of which I am master.

This study was, too, attended with another advantage: it kept me out of mischief. I was always sober, and regular in my attendance; and, not being a clumsy fellow, I met with none of those reproofs, which disgust so many young men with the service.

There is no fituation where merit is so sure to meet with reward as in a well disciplined army. Those who command are obliged to reward it for their own ease and credit. I was soon raised to the rank of Corporal, a rank, which, however contemptible it may appear in some people's eyes, brought me in a clear two-pence per diem, and put a very clever worsted knot upon my shoulder too. Don't you laugh now, Mr. Swanwick; a worsted knot is a much more honourable mark of distinction than a suffom-House badge; though, I confess, the king must have such people as Tide-waiters as well as Corporals.

pondmond, Coloed on de. gramikes in

ed

he

n-

nd

ım-

ced

ring

pro-

en-

dent

ex-

fair pyif

f the

tter by Colone mended a fort of ward in and ap nceasing it; for e I full ead an that, As promotion began to dawn, I grew impatient to get to my regiment, where I expected foon to bask under the rays of Royal favour. The happy day of departure at last came: we set fail from Gravesend, and, after a short and pleasant passage, arrived at Hallisax in Nova Scotia. When I first beheld the barren, not to say hideous, rocks at the entrance of the harbour, I began to fear that the master of the vessel had mistaken his way; for I could perceive nothing of that fertility that my good recruiting Captain had dwelt on with so much delight.

Nova Scotia had no other charm for me than that of novelty. Every thing I saw was new: bogs, rocks and stumps, musquitoes and bull-frogs. Thousands of Captains and Colonels without soldiers, and of 'Squires without stockings or shoes. In England, I had never thought of approaching a 'Squire without a most respectful bow; but, in this new world though I was but a Corporal, I often ordered a 'Squire to bring me a glass of grog, and even to take care of my knapsack.

We staid but a few weeks in Nova Scotia, being ordered to St. John's, in the Province of New Brunswick. Here, and at other places in the same Province, we remained till the month of September, 1791, when the regiment was relieved, and sent home.

We landed at Portsmouth on the 3d of November, and on the 19th of the next month obtained my discharge, after having served no quite short that Majo fined period and

" By

" 1

vitud

" er l

" hone year non-

" regin " for h " good " dere

I share garrison charge.

ipa-

cted

our.

e fet

olea-otia.

nide-

I behad

no-

iting

r me

v was

s and

Colo

ithou

neve

out

world

rderec

evel

Scotia

nce o acesi

mont nt W of N

ionth

ved n nt.

quite eight years, and after having, in that hort space, passed through every rank, from that of a private sentinel to that of Sergeant Major, without ever being once disgraced, confined, or even reprimanded.—But, let my superiors speak for me, they will tell my friends and all my readers what I was during my servitude.

"By the Right Honourable Major Lord Edward
"Fitzgerald, commanding His Majesty's 54th "Regiment of Foot, whereof Lieutenant Ge"neral Frederick is Colonel."

"THESE are to certify, that the Bear"er hereof, William Cobbett, Sergeant "Major in the aforesaid regiment, has served "honestly and faithfully for the space of eight "years, nearly seven of which he has been a "non-commissioned officer, and of that time "he has been five years Sergeant Major to the "regiment; but having very earnestly applied "for his discharge, he, in consideration of his "good behaviour and the services he has ren"dered the regiment, is hereby discharged.

"Given under my hand and the feal "of the regiment, at Portsmouth, this "19th day of December, 1791.

"EDWARD FITZGERALD."

I shall here add the orders, issued in the garrison of Portsmouth on the day of my discharge.

" Portsmouth, 19th Dec. 1791.

"Sergeant Major Cobbett having most press." ingly applied for his discharge, at Major "Lord Edward Fitzgerald's request, General Frede: Frederick has granted it. General Frede: rick has ordered Major Lord Edward Fitzgerald to return the Sergeant Major thanks for his behaviour and conduct during the time of his being in the regiment, and Major Lord Edward adds his most hearty thanks to those of the General."

After having laid these pieces before my reader, I beg him to recollect what the Argus of New York and the Aurora of Philadelphia have afferted concerning Peter Porcupine's being flogged in his regiment for thieving, and afterwards deserting. The monstrous, disorganizing, democratic gang were not aware that I was in possession of such uncontrovertible proofs as these.

I hope, I may prefume that my character will be looked upon as good, down to the date of my discharge; and, if so, it only remains for me to give an account of myself from that time to this.

The democrats have afferted, as may be seen in the preface, that I got my living in London by "garret-scribbling," and that I was obliged to "take a French Leave for France, for some "night work."—Now, the fact is, I went to

France York i that, I
" ret-f
month here, b
" ret-f
vinced
the tin
" wor
not wit lows w tion to call m

Befo to lay Did th unwar they w men ar catche Englist to the ent, al the int magna: " Leav pressio wherei The fa people mace, their g nable 1

France in March, 1792, and I landed at New York in the month of October following; so that, I had but three months to follow "gar-"ret-scribbling" in London. How these three months were employed it is not necessary to say here, but that I had not much leisure for "gar-"ret-scribbling" the ladies will be well convinced, when I tell them that I got a wife in the time. As to the charge concerning "night "work," I am afraid I must plead guilty, but not with my "fingers," as these malicious fellows would infinuate. No, no, I am no relation to Citizen Plato: the French ladies do not call me, the Garçon Fendu.

Before I go any further, it feems necessary to fay a word or two about "French Leave." Did this expression escape the democrats in an unwary moment? Why "French Leave?" Do they wish to infinuate, that nobody but Frenchmen are obliged to fly from the hands of thiefcatchers? The Germans, and after them the English, have applied this degrading expression to the French nation; but, is it not inconfiftent, and even ungrateful, for those who are in the interest, and perhaps, in the pay, of that magnanimous republic, to talk about "French "Leave?" It is fomething curious that this expression should find a place in a paragraph wherein I am accused of abusing the French. The fact is, the friendship professed by these people, towards the French nation, is all grimace, all hypocrify: the moment they are off their guard, they let us see that it is the abomihable system of French tyranny that they are

my
rgus phia
s be-

or

ral

deitz-nks

the

Ma-

nks

and difore that crtible racter e date mains m that e feen ondon bliged fome ent to attached to, and not to the people of that country.—" French Leave!" The leave of a runaway, a thief, a Tom Paine! What could the most prejudiced, the bitterest Englishman have said more galling and severe against the whole French nation? They cry out against me so "abusing" the cut-throats of Nantz and other places, and for accusing the demagogue-tyrans of robbery; while they themselves treat the whole nation as thieves. This is the democratic way of washing out stains; just as the sweet and cleanly Sheelah washes her gent Dermot's face with a dishclout.

Leaving the ingenious citizens to extrical themselves from this hobble, or fall under the displeasure of their masters, I shall return my adventures.—I arrived in France in Marc 1792, and continued there till the beginning of September following, the fix happielt mont of my life. I should be the most ungrates monster that ever existed, were I to speak ill the French people in general. I went to th country full of all those prejudices, that En lishmen suck in with their mother's milk, again the French and against their religion: a fe weeks convinced me that I had been deceive with respect to both. I met every where wi civility, and even hospitality, in a degree th I never had been accustomed to. I found t people, among whom I lived, excepting tho who were already blasted with the principl of the accurfed revolution, honest, pious, at kind to excels.

Peomifer gover of the the ch an inco people flaves never fooner govern under

My States even b feeing of whi flatterin above a led me little lil bibed p was am state, b that me berty th principa coming

I did ;
of 1793;
mage, as ceived the with En

cour

run

l th

hav

whol e fo

othe

yran

at th

demo

as th

gent

trical

ler th

urn

Marc

ginnu

mont

gratef

ak ill

to th at En

, again

: a fe

leceive

ere wi

gree th

ound the

rincipl

ous, al

People may fay what they please about the misery of the French peasantry, under the old government; I have conversed with thousands of them, not ten among whom did not regret the change. I have not room here to go into an inquiry into the causes that have led these people to become the passive instruments, the slaves, of a set of tyrants such as the world never saw before, but I venture to predict, that, some or later, they will return to that form of government under which they were happy, and under which alone they can ever be so again.

My determination to fettle in the United States was formed before I went to France, and even before I quitted the army. A defire of feeing a country, fo long the theatre of a war of which I had heard and read fo much; the flattering picture given of it by Raynal; and, above all, an inclination for feeing the world, led me to this determination. It would look a little like coaxing for me to fay, that I had imbibed principles of republicanism, and that I was ambitious to become a citizen of a free late, but this was really the case. I thought that men enjoyed here a greater degree of liberty than in England; and this, if not the principal reason, was at least one, for my coming to this country.

I did intend to stay in France till the spring of 1793, as well to perfect myself in the language, as to pass the winter at Paris; but I perceived the storm gathering; I saw that a war with England was inevitable, and it was not difficult to foresee what would be the fate of Englishmen, in that country, where the rules had laid aside even the appearance of justice and mercy. I wished, however, to see Pari and had actually hired a coach to go thither. was even on the way, when I heard, at Abbe ville, that the king was dethroned and he guards murdered. This intelligence made me turn off towards Havre de Grace, whence I embarked for America.

I beg leave here to remind the reader, that of of the lying paragraphs, lately published in t lying Aurora, states, that I was whipped at I ris, and that hence I bear a grudge against French Republic. Now, I never was at Par as I can prove by the receipts for my boa and lodging, from the day I entered France that of my leaving it; and, as to the Republ as it is called, I could have no grudge again it; for the tyrants had not given it that nam when I was fo happy as to bid it an etern adieu. Had I remained a few months long I make no doubt that I should have had real to execrate it as every other man, woman, child has, who has had the misfortune to gr under its iron anarchy.

Some little time after my arrival in this courtry, I fent Mr. Jefferson, then Secretary State, a letter of recommendation, which I brought from the American Ambassador at Hague. The following is a copy of the le Mr. Jefferson wrote me on that occasion.

" In " vous " powe " I co " furar " induct" gover lue, a you f you w can fe and i ready

I will ju ankfully eed of M plied to ely to be month poor man

" Philadelphia, Nov. 5th, 1792.

" Sir,

"In acknowledging the receipt of your favour of the 2d instant, I wish it were in my power to announce to you any way in which I could be useful to you. Mr. Short's afsurances of your merit would be a sufficient inducement to me. Public Offices in our government are so few, and of so little value, as to offer no resource to talents. When you shall have been here some small time, you will be able to judge in what way you can set out with the best prospect of success, and if I can serve you in it, I shall be very ready to do it.

" I am,

" Sir,

"Your very humble fervant,

" TH. JEFFERSON."

I will just observe on this letter, that it was ankfully received, and that, had I stood in sed of Mr. Jefferson's services, I should have plied to him; but as that did not appear sely to be the case, I wrote him a letter some months afterwards, requesting him to assist poor man, the bearer of it, and telling him in the lat Parinft that Parinft that boa

ance

iler Nic

ari er.

bb

l h

le n

Ier

epublic e again at nam etern s long ad real man, a to gro retary ich I lor at the lo.

that I should look upon the affistance as given to myself. I dare say he complied with my request, for the person recommended was in deep distress, and a Frenchman.

With respect to the authenticity of this letter there can be no doubt. I have shown the original, as well as those of the other document here transcribed, to more than fifty gentleme of the city of Philadelphia, and they may, any time, be seen by any person of credit, who wishes a sight of them. Nor have I confine the perusal of them to those who have the miss fortune to be deemed aristocrats. Among persons of distant places, I have shown them Mr. Ketlatas of New York, who, I must do him the justice to say, had the candour to express a becoming detestation of the base cut throat author of the threatening letter sent Mr. Oldden.

I have now brought myself to the United States, and have enabled the reader to jude of me so far. It remains for me to negative two affertions which apply to my authority transactions: the one is, that "Mr. Bradfo" put a coat upon my back;" and the other, the I am, or have been, "in the pay of a British Agent."

In the month of July, 1794, the famo Unitarian Doctor, fellow of the Royal Societ London, citizen of France, and delegate the Grande Convention Nationale of notorio memory, landed at New-York. His landing was
the
him repli ple l
was
the truth poor

W this ready them a roo clude from any t bitter to Mi culina into th fellers thors y looked at me he, " God in that me to strik tants, 1 a pamp Carey ince tl highly

ver

m s i

lette

e or

nent

emeray,

t, wh

nfine

e mi

ng pe

nem

uft

r to e ase cu

fent

Unit

to jud

negati

uthori

Bradfo

ther, th

a Brit

e famo

! Socie

legate notoric

s landi

was nothing to me, nor to any body else; but the sulfome and consequential addresses, sent him by the pretended patriots, and his canting replies, at once calculated to flatter the people here, and to degrade his country and mine, was something to me. It was my business, and the business of every man who thinks that truth ought to be opposed to malice and hypocrify.

When the Observations on the Emigration of this " martyr to the cause of liberty" were ready for the press, I did not, at first, offer them to Mr. Bradford. I knew him to retain a rooted hatred against Great Britain, and concluded, that his principles would prevent him from being inftrumental in the publication of any thing that tended to unveil one of its most bitter enemies. I therefore addressed myself to Mr. Carey. This was, to make use of a culinary figure, jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire. Mr. Carey received me as bookfellers generally receive authors (I mean authors whom they hope to get but little by): he looked at the title from top to bottom, and then at me from head to foot.—" No, my lad," fays he, "I don't think it will fuit"—My lad!— God in heaven forgive me! I believe that, at that moment, I wished for another yellow fever to strike the city; not to destroy the inhabitants, but to furnish me too with the subject of a pamphlet, that might make me rich.-Mr. Carey has fold hundreds of the Observations lince that time, and therefore, I dare fay he highly approved of them, when he came to a perusal. At any rate, I must not forget to say, that he behaved honourably in the business; for, he promised not to make known the author, and he certainly kept his word, or the discovery would not have been reserved for the month of June, 1796. This circumstance, considering Mr. Carey's politics, is greatly to his honour, and has almost wiped from my memory that contumelious "my lad."

From Mr. Carey I went to Mr. Bradford, and left the pamphlet for his perusal. The next day I went to him to know his determination. He hefitated, wanted to know if I could not make it a little more popular, adding that, unless I could, he feared that the publishing of it would endanger his windows. More popular I could not make it. I never was of an accommodating disposition in my life. The only alteration I would confent to was in the title. I had given the pamphlet the double title of, " The Tartuffe Detected; or, Observa-"tions, &c." The former was suppressed, though, had I not been pretty certain that every press in the city was as little free as that to which I was fending it, the Tartuffe Detected should have remained; for, the person on whom it was bestowed merited it much better than the character fo named by Molière.

These difficulties, and these fears of the bookfeller, at once opened my eyes with respect to the boasted liberty of the press. Because the laws of this country proclaim to the world, that every man may write and publish freely, and vaus image one. wince he p did, the r like, I did the g a coc I was

ty of

Ifi Boys ceived there, nation that th " of i " Mar back th his pala exposed would 1 applauf what w been fa Great B fied his

dows the

and because I saw the news-papers filled with vaunts on the subject, I was sool enough to imagine that the press was really free for every one. I had not the least idea, that a man's windows were in danger of being broken, if he published any thing that was not popular. I did, indeed, see the words liberty and equality, the rights of man, the crimes of kings, and such like, in most of the bookseller's windows; but I did not know that they were put there to save the glass, as a free republican Frenchman puts a cockade tricolor in his hat to save his head. I was ignorant of all these arcana of the liberty of the press.

If it had so happened that one of the Whiskey-Boys had went over to England, and had received addresses from any part of the people there, congratulating him on his escape from a nation of ruffians, and befeeching the Lord that those ruffians might "tread back the paths " of infamy and ruin;" and if this emigrating " Martyr" in the cause of whiskey had echoed back the hypocritical cant, and if he and all his palavering addressers had been detected and exposed by some good American, in London, would not fuch an American have received the applause of all men of virtue and sense? And what would, or rather what would not, have been said here against the prostituted press of Great Britain, had an English bookseller testified his fears to publish the truth, lest his windows should be dashed in?

bookpect to use the world, freely, s;

u-

he

he

n-

his ne-

ord, The rmiif I

ding

olish-

More

of an The n the ole ti-

serva-

ressed,

at eve-

that to etected

whom

nan the

The work that it was feared would draw down punishment on the publisher, did not contain one untruth, one anarchical, indecent, immoral, or irreligious expression; and yet the bookseller feared for his windows! For what? Because it was not popular enough. A booksel. ler in a despotic state fears to publish a work that is too popular and one in a free state fears to publish a work that is not popular enough. I leave it to the learned philosophers of the " Age of Reason" to determine in which of these states there is the most liberty of the press; for, I must acknowledge, the point is too nice for me: - fear is fear, whether inspired by a Sovereign Lord the King, or by a Sovereign People.

I shall be told, that Mr. Bradford's fear were groundless. It may be so; but he ough to be a competent judge of the matter; he must know the extent of the liberty of the pref better than I could. He might be mistaken but that he was fincere appeared clearly from his not putting his name at the bottom of the title page. Even the Bone to Gnaw for the De mocrats, which did not appear till about fi months afterwards, was "Published for the " Purchasers." It was not till long after the public had fixed the feal of approbation of these pamphlets, that they were honoure with the bookfeller's name. It was fomethin curious that the fecond and third and fourt editions should be entitled to a mark of respect that the first was not worthy of. Poor little innocents! They were thrown on the paril like it was bring is, th

So th
ragge
as she

their But

er an conce teresti

The Observe hishing sees the recollector is work, paper, are diversely off, Mr. (undoubt

According to the second of the ntirely

raw

not

ent,

t the hat?

kfel-

work

fears

gh. I f the ch of press;

by a ereign

fear

ough

er; he

ne prefs

ftaken

ly from

of the

the De bout in

for the after th

ation of onoure

methin

d fourt f respect or little e paris like foundlings; no foul would own them, till it was found that they possessed the gift of bringing in the pence. Another singularity, is, they got into better paper as they advanced. So the prudent matron changes the little dirty ragged wench into a fine mademoiselle, as soon as she perceives that the beaux begin to cast their eyes on her.

But, it is time to return, and give the reader an account of my gains. The pecuniary concerns of an author are always the most interesting.

The terms on which Mr. Bradford took the Observations, were what booksellers call publishing it together. I beg the reader, if he forefees the possibility of his becoming author, to recollect this phrase well. Publishing it together is thus managed: the bookfeller takes the work, prints it, and defrays all expenses of paper, binding, &c. and the profits, if any, are divided between him and the author. -Long after the Observations were sold off, Mr. Bradford rendered me an account undoubtedly a very just one) of the sales. according to this account, my share of the rofits (my share only) amounted to the sum of ne shilling and seven-pence half-penny, curreny of the State of Pennsylvania (or, about leven-pence three farthings sterling), quite ntirely clear of all deductions whatfoever!

F

Now, bulky as this fum appears in words a length, I presume, that when $1/7\frac{1}{2}$ is reduced to figures, no one will suppose it sufficient to put a coat upon my back. If my poor back were not too broad to be clothed with such a sum as this, God knows how I should bear all that has been, and is, and is to be, laid on it by the unmerciful democrats. Why! 1/7 would not cover the back of a Lilliputian no, not even in rags, as they sell here.

Befides, this clothing story will at once fall to the ground, when I assure the reader (and Mr. Carey will bear witness to the truth of what I say), that, when I offered this work so publication, I had as good a coat upon my back, as ever Mr. Bradford or any of his brother booksellers put on in their lives; and, who is more, this coat was my own. No taylor no shoemaker ever had my name in his books.

After the Observations, Mr. Bradford and published it together no longer. When a pair phlet was ready for the press, we made a bargain for it, and I took his note of hand, parable in one, two, or three months. That it public may know exactly what gains I have derived from the publications that issued from Mr. Bradford's, I here subjoin a list of them and the sums received in payment.

Ob Bor Kic Bor Plai

Nev Pro

The genero upon m to purce at the fa Bradfor they we after th

My of The Proports, planation on my

I prop debates, marks. tin Num me volu of fucces ls at uced to back are all on in I/7 ce fal

r (and ruth (

ork fo

oon m d, wh

ylor no

ooks.

rd and a pande a bar

nd, pa

That the s I had

ued from

of then

	Dols.	Cents.
Observations	0	21
Bone to Gnaw, 1st part .	125	0
Kick for a Bite	. 20	0
Bone to Gnaw, 2d Part .	40	0
Plain English	100	0
New Year's Gift	100	0
Prospect	. 18	o
Total	403	21 ,
	-

The best way of giving the reader an idea of the generosity of my bookseller, is, to tell him, that upon my going into business for myself, I offered to purchase the copy-rights of these pamphlets at the same price that I had sold them at. Mr. Bradford's refusing to sell, is a clear proof that they were worth more than he gave me, even after they had passed through several editions. Let it not be said, then, that he put a coat upon my back.

My concerns with Mr. Bradford closed with The Prospect from the Congress-Gallery, and, as our separation has given rise to conjectures and reports, I shall trouble the reader with an explanation of the matter.

I proposed making a mere collection of the debates, with here and there a note by way of temarks. It was not my intention to publish tin Numbers, but at the end of the session, in the volume; but Mr. Bradford, fearing a want of success in this form, determined on publish-

tho

bee

tha

pu

me

par

to T

deb

66

" th

" Ph

To

"I

note

stan

ing in Numbers. This was without my approbation, as was also a subscription that was opened for the support of the work. When about half a Number was finished, I was informed that many gentlemen had expressed their defire, that the work might contain a good deal of original matter, and few debates. In consequence of this, I was requested to alter my plan; I said I would, but that I would by no means undertake to continue the work.

The first Number, as it was called (but not by me), was published, and its success led Mr. Bradford to press for a continuation. His for offered me, I believe, a hundred dollars Number, in place of eighteen; and, I should have accepted his offer, had it not been for word that escaped him during the conversation He observed, that their customers would be much disappointed, for that, his father ha promised a continuation, and that it should be made very interesting. This flip of the tongue opened my eyes at once. What! a bookfelle undertake to promife that I should write, and that I should write to please his customers too No; if all his customers, if all the Congress with the Prefident at their head, had come an folicited me; nay, had my falvation depende on a compliance, I would not have written and ther line.

I was fully employed at this time, having translation on my hands for Mr. Moreau de S Mery as well as another work which took us a great deal of my time; so that, I believe, hould not have published the Censor, had it not been to convince the customers of Mr. Bradford, that I was not in his pay; that I was not the pupper and he the show-man. That, whatever merits or demerits my writings might have, no part of them fell to his share.

When Mr. Bradford found I was preparing to publish a continuation of the remarks on the debates, he fent me the following note:

" Sir,

"Send me your account and a receipt for the last publication, and your money shall be fent you by

"Yours, &c. 12

dass not prompt was to fulfall you fliali there meet you on fuch grow

"Tho. BRADFORD."

To this I returned, for answer.

" Philadelphia, 22d March, 1796.

" Sir,

"I have the honour to possess your laconic "note; but, upon my word, I do not under-"stand it. The requesting of a receipt from a

His for a collars a flould en for a creation ould be ther had appro-

open-

about

ormed

eir den con-

ter my

by no

but not

led Mr

hould be tongue, ookfelle ite, and Congress ome and ependenten tten and having au de S took u person, before any tender of money is made,

" and the note being dated in April in place of " March; these things throw such an obscurity

"over the whole, that I defer complying with " its contents, till I have the pleasure of see" ing yourfelf.

" I am

" Your most obedient

" Humble fervant,

" WM. COBBETT."

This brought me a second note, in these words:

" Sir, . . 3 .

" Finding you mean to pursue the Prospect, which you sold to me, I now make a demand of " the fulfillment of your contract and if honour

" does not prompt you to fullfill your engage" ments, you may rely on an applycation to the " laws of my country and make no doubt I hall there meet you on fuch grounds as will " convince you I am not to be trifled with.

" I am

" Yours, &c.

"Tho. BRADFORD.

" March 22, 1796.

it it in mir flow

for for three It fe

and

el ra ever exclu catch
" wo
ever
drud
his poreliev

whom applar

I no have b

Then

a flee

ment.
In t

have It

Here ended the correspondence, except that it might be said to be continued for about five minutes longer by the hearty laugh, that I befowed on this correct and polite billet.

It is fomething truly fingular, that Mr. Bradford should threaten me with a profecution for not writing, just at the moment that others threatened me with a profecution for writing. It seemed a little difficult to set both at open defiance, yet this was done, by continuing to write, and by employing another bookseller.

Indeed these booksellers, in general, are a cruelrace. They imagine that the soul and body of every author that falls into their hands, is their exclusive property. They have adopted the bird-catcher's maxim: "a bird that can sing, and "wont sing, ought to be made sing." Whenever their devils are out of employment, the drudging goblin of an author must sharpen up his pen, and never think of repose till he is relieved by the arrival of a more profitable job. Then the wretch may remain as undisturbed as a sleep-mouse in winter, while the stupid dolt whom he has clad and fattened, receives the applause.

I now come to the affertion, that I am, or have been, in the pay of the British government.

In the first place the democrats swear that I have been "frequently visited by a certain "Agent," meaning I suppose Mr. Bond: to

гт."

le,

of

ity

vith fee-

these nand of honour engagen to the doubt I s as will with.

DFORD

th

wh

the

trib

tho

in

the

Wei

of t

fay t been

Can

them

had,

they I

appro

ford,

he told

infifted

Did this Besides

Bradfor

have len

ons; for verled w legree of

I have

this I answer, that it is an abominable lie. I never saw Mr. Bond but three times in my life, and then I had business with him as the interpreter of Frenchmen, who wanted certificates from him, in order to secure their property in the conquered colonies. I never in my life spoke to, corresponded with, or even saw, to my knowledge, either of the British Ministers, or any one of their retinue. Mr. Bradford once told me, that Mr. Allen, the father-in-law of Mr. Hammond, said he was acquainted with me. If this gentleman did really say so, he joked, or he told a lie; for he never saw me in his life, that I know of.

A little while after the New Year's Gift was published, an attack was made in the Argus of New York, on the supposed author of it; in consequence of which, this supposed author or some one in his behalf, took occasion to observe, in Mr. Claypoole's paper, that it was uncandid to attribute to a gentleman of irreproachable character, what was well known to be the work of a democrat. I had a great mind to say at that time, what I shall now say and that is, that let this gentleman be who havil, I think myself as good as he, and of as good a character too; and that, as to the dishonout attached to the publication, I am willing take it all to myself.

It is hard to prove a negative; it is what man is expected to do; yet, I think I caprove, that the accusation of my being in Br tish pay is not supported by one single fact, or the least shadow of probability.

When a foreign government hires a writer, it takes care that his labours shall be distributed, whether the readers are all willing to pay for them or not. This we daily see verified in the distribution of certain blasphemous gazettes, which, though kicked from the door with disdain, flies in at the window. Now, has this ever been the case with the works of Peter Porcupine? Were they ever thrusted upon people in spite of their remonstrances? Can Mr. Bradford fay that thousands of these pamphlets have ever been paid for by any agent of Great Britain? Can he say that I have ever distributed any of them? No; he can fay no fuch thing. They had, at first, to encounter every difficulty, and they have made their way supported by public approbation, and by that alone. Mr. Bradford, if he is candid enough to repeat what he told me, will fay, that the British Conful, when he purchased half a dozen of them, infifted upon having them at the wholefale price! Did this look like a defire to encourage them? Befides, those who know any thing of Mr. Bradford, will never believe, that he would have lent his aid to a British Agent's publications; for, of all the Americans I have yet conrefled with, he feems to entertain the greatest degree of rancour against that nation.

I have every reason to believe, that the Bri-Consul was far from approving of some, at life, iter-

ates y in 7 life

w, to sters, once aw of

with fo, he w me

ift was rgus o it; i author a to ob t it wa of irre nownt a gre now lay e who l of as goo lishono is what willing

ink Ic ing in B least, of my publications. I happened to be in a bookseller's shop, unseen by him, when he had the goodness to say, that I was a "wild "fellow." On which I shall only observe, that when the King bestows on me about five hundred pounds sterling a year, perhaps, I may become a tame fellow, and hear my master, my countrymen, my friends and my parents, belied and execrated, without saying one single word in their defence.

C

N

ha

is

er

ev

my He

que

my

ope

van

as I

ation

mak

had

Th from

to atte

nation

teazed fubject

have gi

pocritic

my cou

ed it ". More th

have do

duty; th

Had the Minister of Great Britain employed me to write, can it be supposed that he would not furnish me with the means of living well, without becoming the retailer of my own works? Can it be supposed that he would have fuffered me ever to appear on the fcene It must be a very poor king that he serves if he could not afford me more than I can get by keeping a book-shop. An Ambal fador from a king of the Gypfies could no have acted a memer part. What! where wa all the "gold of Pitt?" That gold which tempt ed, according to the democrats, an America Envoy to fell his country, and two-thirds the Senate to ratifyy the bargain: that gol which, according to the Convention of France has made one half of that nation cut the throa of the other half; that potent gold could no keep Peter Porcupine from standing behind counter to fell a pen-knife, or a quire of pape

Must it not be evident, too, that the keeing of a shop would take up a great part of not time? Time that was hardly worth a paying

be

ien

vild

hat

un-

may

my

be-

ingle

loyed

would

well,

OWI

would

fcene ferves,

1 can

Ambal ould not

nere wa

htempt

merical

thirds o

that gol f Franc

he throa

could n g behind

of pape

the kee

part of t

n a payi

for at all, if it was not of higher value than the profits on a few pamphlets. Every one knows that the Cenfor has been delayed on account of my entering on business; would the Minister of Great Britain have suffered this, had I been in his pay? No; I repeat, that it is downright stupidity to suppose, that he would ever have fuffered me to appear at all, had he even felt in the least interested in the fate of my works, or the effect they might produce. He must be sensible, that, seeing the unconquerable prejudices existing in this country, my being known to be an Englishman would operate weightily against whatever I might advance. I faw this very plainly myfelf; but, as I had a living to get, and as I had determined on this line of business, such a consideration was not to awe me into idleness, or make me forego any other advantages that I had reason to hope I should enjoy.

The notion of my being in British pay arose from my having now-and-then taken upon me to attempt a defence of the character of that nation, and of the intentions of its government towards the United States. But, have I ever teazed my readers with this, except when the subject necessarily demanded it? And if I have given way to my indignation when a hypocritical political divine attempted to degrade my country, or when its vile calumniators called it "an insular Bastile," what have I done more than every good man in my place would have done? What have I done more than obeyed the feelings of my heart?

When a man hears his country reviled, does it require that he should be paid for speaking in its defence?

cam

W

m

cal

ule

one

« e

" b

" et

" of be

" ged

" nat

" no

Are of the

as your

tion of tries, b

above q

cargo of

to tell th

England

e fure t

Besides, had my works been intended to introduce British influence, they would have assumed a more conciliating tone. The author would have flattered the people of this country, even in their excesses; he would have endeavoured to gain over the enemies of Britain by smooth and soothing language; he would have "stooped to conquer;" he would not, as I have done, rendered them hatred for hatred, and scorn for scorn.

My writings, the first pamphlet excepted, have had no other object than that of keeping alive an attachment to the Constitution of the United States and the inestimable man who is at the head of the government, and to paint in their true colours those who are the enemies of both; to warn the people, of all ranks and descriptions, of the danger of admitting among them, the anarchical and blasphemous principles of the French revolutionists, principles as opposite to those of liberty as hell is to heaven. If, therefore, I have written at the instance of a British agent, that agent must most certainly deferve the thanks of all the rea friends of America. But, say some of the hal democrats, what right have you to meddle with the defence of our government at all? The same right that you have to exact my obe dience to it, and my contribution towards it support. Several Englishmen, not so long the country as I had been, ferved in the militia against the western rebels, and, had I been called on, I must have ferved too. Surely a man has a right to defend with his pen, that which he may be compelled to defend with a musquet.

in-

afhor

un-

en-

itain

ould

t, as tred,

epted,

eeping

of the

who is o paint

nemies

among princi-

inciples s to hea t the in the rea

the hal

meddl

at all?

my obe

wards i

long

As to the real, bloody, cut-throats, they carry their notion of excluding me from the use of the press still further. "While" (says one of them) "While I am a friend to "the unlimited freedom of the press, when " exercised by an American, I am an implaca-" ble foe to its profitution to a foreigner, and " would at any time affift in hunting out of foci-" ety, any meddling foreigner who should dare " to interfere in our politics. I hope the apathy " of our brethren of Philadelphia will no longer " be indulged, and that an exemplary ven-" geance will foon burst upon the head of such "a presumptuous fellow.—Justice, honour, " national gratitude, all call for it. -- May it " no longer be delayed. " An American."

Are not you, Mr. Swanwick, the President of the Emigration Society? Well, then, Sir, as your institution is said to be for the information of persons emigrating from soreign countries, be so good as to insert the little extract, above quoted, in your next dispatches for a cargo of emigrants. Above all, Sir, be sure to tell those who are disposed to emigrate from lingland, those martyrs in the cause of liberty; be sure to tell them that this is the land of equal liberty; that here, and here alone, they will find the true unlimited freedom of the press, but that, if they dare to make use of it, " justice, " honour, national gratitude, will call for ex" emplary vengeance on their heads."

ti th ea

ed

ing

the

wh

to 1

I

2 110

the

the

now

Ihav

ed in on, 1

one b partic

being how co

ning tl

would and had have be in the o

erest as

or, at or ever

I should not have noticed this distinction between foreigners and Americans, had I not perceived, that feveral persons, who are, generally speaking, friends to their country, seem to think that it was impertinent in me to meddle with the politics here, because I was an Eng. lishman. I would have these good people to recollect, that the laws of this country hold out, to foreigners, an offer of all that liberty of the press which Americans enjoy, and that, if this liberty be abridged, by whatever means it may be done, the laws and the constitution and all together is a mere cheat; a fnare to catch the credulous and enthusiastic of every other nation; a downright imposition on the world. If people who emigrate hither have not a right to make use of the liberty of the press, while the natives have, it is very ill done to call this a country of equal liberty. Equal above all epithets, is the most improper that can be applied to it; for, if none but Ameri cans have access to the press, they are the mal ters and foreigners are their subjects, nay the flaves. An honourable and comfortable fitua tion upon my word! The emigrants from fom countries may be content with it, perhaps: would not fay, that the "Martyrs in the cau "of liberty" from England, would not quiet bend beneath the yoke, as, indeed, they a

Illiv

out

ice,

ex-

be-

per-

eral-

m to eddle

Eng-

hold

iberty

d that,

means

titution

nare to

f every er have

y of the ill done

t Ameri

the mal

able fitua

erhaps:

the cau

ot quiet they ar

Equal, per that in duty bound to do; but, for my part, who have not the ambition to aspire to the crown of martyrdom, I must and I will be excused. Either the laws shall be altered, or I will continue to avail myself of the liberty that they held out to me, and that partly tempted me to the country. When an act is passed for excluding Englishmen from exercising their talents, and from promulgating what they write, then will I desist; but, I hope, when that time arrives, no act will be passed to prevent people from emigrating back again.

Before I conclude, it feems necessary to fay a word or two about the miferable shift, which the democrats have had recourse to, respecting the infamous letter of Citizen Hint. They now pretend, that I fabricated it myfelf, though I have publicly declared, that it was delivered into my hands by a gentleman of reputation, whose name I have mentioned. Can any one be stupid enough to imagine, that I would, particularly at this time, have run the risk of being detected in fuch a shameful business? And, how could it have been undertaken without running that risk? Had I written it myself, there would have been my hand-writing against me, and had I employed another, that other might have betrayed me; he might have ruined me in the opinion of all those, whom it is my inerest as well as my pride to be esteemed by; or, at best, I should have been at his mercy or ever afterwards.

Besides the great risk of detection, let any one point out, if he can, what end I could propose to myself by such a device. As to making my shop and myself known, I presume I did not stand in need of a scare-crow, to effect that, when the kind democrats themselves had published to the whole Union, that I had taken the house in which I live, for the purpose of retailing my "poison," as they called it, and had even had the candour to tell the world, that I had paid my rent in advance.* They affect to believe, sometimes, that the letter was a mere trick to bring in the pence, and, in one of their latest paragraphs, they call me a

* It was to Mr. Franklin Bache's creditable and in corruptible Gazette, that I was indebted for this volunteer advertisement. This was generous in a declare foe; but those will not be assonished at the editor's can dour and tolerating principles, who are acquainted with the following anecdote.

From the European Magazine, for Sept. 1795, page 156.

to

all

ano

inv the

tho

tion

"When Voltaire arrived at Paris, an interview to place between him and Franklin. After the first complete, which by the way were more adulative the comported with the character of an American, as above all of a stern Republican, the Doctor present his grandson to Voltaire, in soliciting for him blessing. The philosopher of impiety relished the place fantry; and to render the farce complete, he from his chair, and with a patriarchal air, laid hands on the head of the child, and solemnly promounced, in a loud voice, these three words: Chiberty, and Toleration. All the pious were shocked at the American, who, they said, burlesqued Religion in asking the blessing of Voltaire."

"catch-penny author." But, let them recollect, that I am now a bookfeller, whose trade it is to get money; and if I am driven to such shifts as the Scare-Crow, to get a diving, let them reconcile this circumstance with their affertions concerning my being liberally paid by Great Britain. A man in British pay, rolling in "the Gold of Pitt," could certainly never be fo reduced as to venture every thing for the sake of collecting a few eleven-penny bits. It is the misfortune of the democrats ever to surnish arguments against themselves.

Those who reason upon the improbability of the democrat's sending the threatening letter, do not recollect the extract I have above quoted from the Aurora, in which the people of Philadelphia are called upon to murder me, and are told, that "justice, honour, and national gratitude demand it." Is it very improbable that men, capable of writing paragraphs like this, should, upon finding the people deaf to their honourable infinuations, attempt to intimidate my landlord by a cut-throat letter?

Their great object is to filence me, to this all their endeavours point: lies, threats, spies and informers, every engine of Jacobinical invention is played off. I am forry to tell them, that it is all in vain, for I am one of those whose obstinacy increases with opposition,

H

any could As to elume to ef-

Ifelves
I had urpofe
lled it,
world,

y affect was a in one I me a de and in his voluna declared itor's can inted wit

Sept.

erview took the first comb lulative that merican, and for prefent for him h shed the plan plete, he ro l air, laid folemnly pr
words:
were shock
squed Religion

I have now to apologize to my indulgent reader, for having taken up so much of his time with subjects relating chiefly to myself. The task, has, to me, been a very disagreeable one; but it was become necessary, as well for the vindication of my own character as for the satisfaction of my friends; yes, in spite of envy, malice and salfehood, I say, my numerous and respectable friends, who, I trust, will be well pleased to find, that there is nothing in the history of Peter Porcupine to raise a blush for the commendations they have bestowed on his works, or to render them unworthy of their future support.

END.

COPY RIGHT SECURED ACCORDING TO LAW.

Showi Jaco merica

nto

I HI inft: once a histomplete Revolutio 795, will chavo, ea ages. It na new

Subfers of Philington of Davidso th Caroli

The pr

PROPOSALS

By William Cobbett, opposite Christ Church, Philadelphia) FOR PUBLISHING BY SUBSCRIPTION,

THE

HISTORY OF JACOBINISM,

CRIMES, CRUELTIES AND PERFIDIES: COMPRISING

AN INQUIRY

as

III

ny

ıft,

10-ise

be-

VOI-

LAW

nto the Manner of diffeminating, under the Appearance of PHILOSOPHY and VIRTUE, PRINCIPLES

WHICH ARE EQUALLY SUBVERSIVE OF

ORDER, VIRTUE, RELIGION,

LIBERTY AND HAPPINESS.

BY WILLIAM PLAYFAIR,

AUTHOR OF THE COMMERCIAL AND POLITICAL ATLAS, &c.

With an Appendix,

By Leter Lorcupine.

Showing the close connection which has ever subsisted between gasobins at Paris and the Democrats in United States of merica.

CONDITIONS.

THIS new, entertaining and & instructive work, which is at & mee a history of Jacobinisin and a omplete history of the French & 795, will confift of two volumes, a chave, each containing about 300 ages. It shall be well printed, 8 n a new type and fine paper. The price of each volume, & bound in boards, will be one Dollar and a Quarter, paid for on delivery; and to non-fubscribers, a Dollar and a Half.

Revolution down to the end of § III. As foon as a fufficient number of copies shall be subscribed for, the work will be put to the prefs, and finished as expeditiously as a strict attention to neatness and accuracy will admit of.

Subscriptions taken by the publisher, and the principal bookers of Philadelphia; Messrs. Spotswood and Nancrede of Boston; Mr. ngton of New York; Mr. Rice of Baltimore; Messrs. Pritchard Davidson of Richmond, Virginia; and Mr. Young of Charleston, th Carolina.

